Science is defined as “knowledge.” I’ve always assumed scientists are smarter than I am, because they have university degrees and a bunch of letters after their names. I acknowledge that they must have higher intelligence quotients (IQs) than I do, but does that make them right about everything?

What can uneducated people do if they don’t agree with so-called scientific conclusions about a given topic?

Research!

Scientific study is research.

I’m not a scientist, but I’m going to attempt to “scientifically analyze” my drinking problem using the basic procedure high-school science students are taught: O.P.E.C. (not the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Companies).

The OPEC procedure is:
1. Observe – check out the question or problem
2. Predict – hypothesize (make a good guess)
3. Conclude – is my guess correct?
4. Experiment – put the pieces together to figure out what’s really going on

By using the OPEC method, I can look back and record my experience objectively (treating or dealing with facts without distortion by my personal feelings or prejudices). I’ve realized that for most of my life I have made decisions based on how I feel. Because feelings change, I decided I needed to analyze my life — and my “alcoholism” — objectively. And because I don’t agree with the experts about alcoholism being a disease, I decided to be as scientific as possible in my analysis.

Recovery/Rehabilitation

The Problem: When I finally reached the point of being sick and tired of being sick and tired of hangovers, violent fights with my husband, loss of self-respect, and the lack of willpower to change my life, there was only one possible solution for me at the time — in-patient rehab.

Observation:
- I’m addicted to alcohol.
- I’m a victim of my disease.
- The medical doctor’s diagnosis was “acute brain disorder.” The diagnosis was necessary for insurance coverage for in-house treatment.

Prediction:
- I’m going to die an alcoholic if I don’t change my thinking and behavior — I must abstain from drinking!

Experiment:
- Stopped drinking after first AA meeting.
- Craved alcohol; couldn’t go without it; too painful — started drinking again.
- Volunteered for in-patient treatment: dry-out, ingest mega doses of vitamin B-complex.
- Indoctrination and written exercises in 12-step “therapy” for my disease; and physical/recreational therapy (walked the hospital hallways and painted Christmas ornaments).

Conclusion:
- I am an alcoholic.
- Alcoholism is a disease with no cure.
- I must abstain from alcohol to avoid instant relapse — reactivation of my addiction. My brain remembers when I had my last drink, and it’s waiting to be triggered.
- Abstinence is only possible by attending AA meetings, and having a sponsor to guide and support my recovery by working the 12-steps.
- There is power in sobriety — I am master of my fate as long as I follow the AA way of sobriety.

Relapse Prevention

The Problem: The first 2 years that I was sober I would periodically relapse. I was living a lie to almost everyone, including myself, and I was doing it for the wrong reasons. I was still using to escape and avoid the feelings associated with being sober. For me, relapse helped me feel normal and it gave me an escape. The feeling of having control and being able to “do things” again was a source of strength. I was afraid that I would be found out and that my friends and family would all leave me. I was afraid that I was still a failure, a disappointment to everyone, and a total disappointment to myself. I was afraid that I would never truly be accepted as a normal person. And I was afraid that I didn’t have the strength to deal with my feelings.

Prediction:
- I will relapse.

Experimental Design:
- I will write a paper on the 12-steps of AA, and I will not change until I am ready.

Conclusion:
- Relapse is not inevitable; I can choose not to relapse.
- I can deal with my feelings and stop using to escape.
- I can deal with my feelings without using alcohol.
- I can deal with my feelings and deal with my feelings without using alcohol.

This OPEC analysis of my change from being a drunk to becoming sober by abstaining through AA indoctrination and practice is an accurate analysis from my perspective (all researchers and practitioners have their own way of analyzing problems).

I wasn’t a good joiner, and didn’t like going to AA meetings on a regular basis. My peers were sincere about working their program, but I wasn’t comfortable being expected to rehash my past and personal experiences. And I soon tired of hearing the same war stories over and over again. (I didn’t... much like the swearing either, but who was I to complain — I had a dirty mouth.)

My unwillingness to wholeheartedly participate in the structured, continuous recovery may be because of my natural independent nature. I followed the program my own way and in my own time. (An OPEC analysis of my way of thinking would probably conclude that I had a rebellious attitude. Daft!)

Nonetheless, I remained sober for three months using Antabuse until ... (An OPEC analysis of my way of thinking would probably conclude that I had a rebellious attitude. Daft!)

OPEC ANALYSIS No. 2
HEALED BY FAITH IN JESUS CHRIST

THE PROBLEM: I’m sober, but I’m angry all the time. My marriage is still on the rocks. I fear relapse. My family is obsessed with Jesus! Life is dull and colorless. No pleasure! No fun! Is this all there is? I want more! I want peace! 1 .. I .. I!!

OBSERVATION:
• God says I am a sinner, spiritually dead and eternally separated from Him.
• My addiction is a symptom of my sin nature.
• He has a plan for redeeming my life for His purpose.
• He promises more than “sobriety” — He promises new life!

PREDICTION:
• If I believe in His Son, Jesus Christ, as the complete payment for my sinful state, my life will change for forever ...
• My disease of sin will be healed if I surrender my life to Jesus.

EXPERIMENT:
• God called me by name and simply said: “Accept My Son.”
• I responded reluctantly, obediently: “Okay, I accept Your Son!”
• Agreed to go to church with my husband two weeks later — somehow I knew I must “surrender” to the “urge.”
• Heard and understood the pastor’s message of God’s love for me, and His plan of salvation, as though he was speaking directly to me.
• Became emotionally overwhelmed by God’s love, forgiveness and acceptance.
• Left the building with profound hope and strong, irresistible desire for more of God’s Word; went directly to tape library to sign-up.
• Stopped ingesting Antabuse the next day — no craving or desire for rum.
• Attended Sunday, Sunday and Thursday night services every week thereafter.
• Recorded/transcribed Bible lessons
• Listened to my pastor on the radio every day.
• Irresistible urge to tell everyone about salvation by faith in Jesus.

CONCLUSION:
• God was right!
• God IS right! I am a sinner saved by His mercy and grace.
• I am forever a new, spiritual creation in Christ! The old is gone, the new has come! (And it still keeps coming!)

• Perfect love casts out fear!
• God is Love!

Now the Lord is the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. But we all … are being transformed into the same image from glory to glory, just as by the Spirit of the Lord.”
2 CORINTHIANS 3:17-18 NKJV

May our precious Lord enrich your spiritual life daily by His Spirit! JW

Using the “scientific” OPEC method helped me to clarify the differences between man’s “recovery” and God’s sanctification.

Recovery (as it relates to addiction) is a medical term and is limited to the physical/material body (the flesh). Recovery is what we do for ourselves — working hard to abstain from addictive behavior.

Sanctification is what God (the Father, Son and Holy Spirit) does for us — helping us to abstain from sin. God is preparing our immortal souls for eternity with Him.
Are you in recovery or in Jesus?
Are you following the crowd or are you following Jesus?
Are you being conformed into the image and likeness of Jesus?
